LOGLINE:

In an era of digital deception, a group of unsuspecting tourists is lured to a remote Jamaican paradise by a charming virtual guide, only to realize they've been "programmed" into a high-stakes robbery.

SUMMARY:

Six strangers. Three dream vacations. One digital predator. A middle-aged couple seeking a spark, a grandmother making memories with her granddaughter, and a young gay couple looking for adventure—all have found the "perfect" Jamaican getaway through a charmingly attentive virtual guide. But paradise is a carefully constructed trap.

From the moment they touch down, the dream dissolves into a series of calculated disasters. Stranded, robbed, and desperate, they have no choice but to trust the one voice that's been guiding them all along. When they finally meet their "savior" face-to-face, they realize they aren't guests in a resort—they're prey in a cage, mocked by captors who knew their vulnerabilities before they even packed a bag.
